Abstract

Lake Artemesia is an urban respite located along the Washington DC metro rail line. This tranquil lake is home to hundreds of species of birds and mammals including beavers, deer and herons. As a gathering place for residents of the Maryland/DC community, Lake Artemesia feels like a paradise for resting and communing with nature. For artists, it is also a great source of inspiration, buzzing with the sounds of birds and laughing children playing on the pier. Cyclists, birders, fishermen, college students, and others regularly gather at this lake to enjoy some of the most amazing sunsets in the area. Whatever the day has brought, this park offers a therapeutic stillness and quiet release from the stress of daily life.
